POPPIES TO HONOR NATION'S WAR DEAD

"Wear a poppy to honor the war dead and aid war's living victims."

This is the appeal that will be made to everyone in Bethel by the American Legion Auxiliary on Poppy Day, May 21. It has been announced by Mrs. A. D. Forbes, Poppy Chairman of Mundt-Allen Unit of the Auxiliary.

Women of the Auxiliary will be on the streets throughout the day offering the symbolic memorial poppies and receiving contributions for the Auxiliary's work in behalf of disabled veterans and needy children of veterans. The poppies will be crepe paper replicas of the wild poppies which grew "between the crosses, row on row" in the battle cemeteries in France and Belgium. They have been made for the Auxiliary by disabled veterans of both World Wars.

"This year the poppy will have added significance because of the long lists of war dead from Korea which have been added to the heroic roll of those who have died for America," Mrs. Forbes said. "Also there will be increased need for the Poppy Day contribution because of the many thousands of young men disabled in the Korean fight."

We hope that everyone will understand that the memorial poppy means honor for the nation's war dead and aid for those suffering as a result of war service and will wear one of the little red flowers proudly on Poppy Day."

A Blow to Communism

After several years of making things easy for the Communist conspirators in our midst, a majority of the United States Supreme Court has recently demonstrated a more informed and solidly American standpoint. The court has just crushed two of the pet arguments of the left-wingers and self-styled "liberals" who have been setting up such a howl and cry against loyalty oaths for teachers and against firing of known Reds and fellow-travelers on the faculties of the schools and colleges of the nation. The favorite arguments of the so-called left-wingers and of many "liberals" are (1) that Communists have the right under academic freedom to employment as teachers in American schools and colleges regardless of their outside political beliefs and affiliations, and (2) that firing teachers because of their membership in Communist fronts constitutes "guilt by association" and such a branding, they contend is un-American and unconstitutional. In the 4-3 decision, on New York's Feinberg Law, the high court blasted both of these arguments.

Feinberg Law

The Feinberg Law was enacted in 1949 and was aimed at teachers in New York schools and colleges who were charged with being Communists or having been in contact with known Communists. The law required teachers to sign a statement of their political beliefs and affiliations. If they refused to sign, they could be fired. The law was challenged in court by several teachers who argued that it violated their constitutional rights.

The law was upheld by the Supreme Court in a 4-3 decision. The majority opinion, written by Chief Justice Warren, stated that the law was a valid exercise of the state's power to protect its schools from Communist influence. The dissenting opinion, written by Justice Brandeis, argued that the law violated the First Amendment's guarantee of free speech.

The Feinberg Law was a landmark case in the history of the Feinberg Law. It was the first time the Supreme Court had ruled on the constitutionality of a law that required teachers to sign a statement of their political beliefs and affiliations. The decision was a blow to the Communist Party and its supporters, who had been using the law as a tool to keep teachers out of schools.

DALE CARNEGIE

AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING"

Discover What You Can Do

DR. S. A. HAMRIN, professor of education at Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois, told the following in his "Guidance Talks to Teachers." I think it will interest you.

At one time it was Dr. Hamrin's job to inform those who were doing unsatisfactory work that they had to improve or be dismissed. One day he told a girl who had been failing for two consecutive quarters, and to whom they had given considerable assistance, that she could no longer continue in the college. Her response was puzzling! She just sat and smiled at him. Had she cried or become angry? Dr. Hamrin would have probably known what to do because these were the more common reactions in such situations.

Finally she said, "Well?" And he responded with another "Well?" Now she replied, "Now that you have told me what I can't do, I suppose you and your committee are going to give an equal amount of attention to what I can do."

Dr. Hamrin says that was a real lesson for him. Knowing what the girl could not do was important, but it was more important for Dr. Hamrin and his committee to find out what the girl could do. He went on to explain that she was out of place in a teacher's college, that she was not especially interested and that she probably lacked the type of academic aptitudes required. However, he continued, they had found that she had an unusual knowledge of fabrics, and that her interest and ability to work with people was at a very high level. Then he introduced her to the manager of a local store where she started working in the dry goods department.

Result? That girl is now a highly paid buyer in one of the finest department stores in the entire country.

Economic Highlights

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

For many years, stories have been making the rounds about wonderful discoveries which have been suppressed and buried in the deepest depths of the deep freeze by "selfish" commercial interests. It is impossible to know how many people believe these fables, but the number is probably substantial. And they are something of a headache to the industries involved, which become the targets of unduly fervent attacks.

Some time ago Roger Williams published an article in Science News Letter, called "Phantom Inventions," in which he dealt with these stories. All of them, he observed, have four common characteristics: (1) they are never verified; (2) they are never published in the patent office; (3) they are never published in the patent office; (4) they are never published in the patent office.

Still another tells of an amazing contraption which will give 60 miles to the gallon of gas. Again, it is all a myth. The oil companies grabbed the patent and made sure the device will never be marketed. No one has ever been able to find this patent in the patent office files, which is a convenient oversight.

CUT THE VINE THAT CHOKES

are open to the public—but that fact is also overlooked in the telling.

An amusing variant of this has been making the rounds lately. It seems a man bought a new car in the low-price bracket. When it was brought in for servicing the dealer asked how he liked it. The owner was all enthusiasm—it was the first running machine he'd ever had and, on top of that, it got 50 miles to the gallon. The dealer turned pale, lifted the car's hood and peered into the engine compartment. He turned back to the owner and, obviously in a state of worried excitement, said that he'd turned the highest priced car manufactured for the machine. The owner refused, and a still higher offer was made. Finally, in desperation the dealer explained. The car the man had bought, he said, was an experimental model which had been shipped from the factory in error. The company had been producing the nation for it, and would pay anything to get it back. There the story ends. The fact is, of course, that experimental cars are not even produced in the same plants as standard models, and it would be impossible for one of them to be included in the regular shipments to dealers.

Still another tall tale deals with a razor blade which will last forever, and which was bought by a leading razor company for millions and suppressed. The razor people made strenuous effort to trace this story to its source, but were unsuccessful. They said they'd never seen such a blade, but they'd certainly like to.

Official bodies have investigated charges that astonishingly valuable patents were being abused or suppressed. Anyone who wished to was free to testify. But all that was ever unearthed was rumor—never a fact.

AN EDITORIAL that will make the reader think appeared recently in The Tribune, Prineville, Oregon. Here it is:

"Back in a little town in eastern Oregon, there's an old farmer, now retired, who's establishing a great local reputation for being a very shrewd man. If you were to watch him as he goes around the town, talking to this person and the other, or at a public meeting, you could say, 'There's a smart man.'"

"But if you studied the man—his life and what he's done—you'd discover yourself wondering if he actually is so smart. He's always against anything new, he's against it. Many of the things he has opposed should have been opposed. As a town leader, he was opposed to lavish spending of town funds, he was opposed to all forms of federal control.

"But his weakness was, and is, the fact that he never suggested anything positive to form a source of action. By opposing, and only opposing, he never led his townpeople into progressive activity. . . . It is common knowledge that if you oppose, without offering another line of action, the opposition is meaningless. . . ."

"Thinking and speaking for definite beliefs takes courage. It also takes faith. We have been losing ground against confusion and bitterness because of the lack of faith and the lack of courage to believe in a definite program for the future."

"The safest side for a man to take is the side of the status quo."

"During the present fiscal year, federal spending will equal the income of all the inhabitants of this quarter of Missouri!" — Ansonia (Conn.) Sentinel.

To Be Patient

THE words, "Be patient," are often taken to mean that one should submit passively to a discordant situation and wait to see what will happen; that one must be resigned and submissive under adverse conditions.

But to be patient more justly means something besides mere submission and quiet waiting. It signifies to stand firm in what one knows to be right, loving, and certain; to be quietly alert and expectant of good.

Jesus expressed such patience with his often dull and wavering disciples. He lovingly, persistently, and expectantly taught them the way of spiritual living through example and precept.

Those who are acquainted with farming know that after the farmer has prepared the soil and sown his seed, he does not sit idly by to see it sprout and come to fruition. He must carefully cultivate the soil and protect the growing plants from insect pests and other enemies.

The Apostle James makes this interesting comparison (James 5:7, 8): "Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. He ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

Patience is an active quality which builds freely, constructively, and joyously on the foundation of Truth, even though error seems to insist that we are in bondage to material sense. When Paul and Silas were cast into prison and their feet were made fast in the stocks, they did not yield resignedly to the limitation of hopelessness. They prayed and sang hymns of joy. And they went free!

The writer once saw this statement in an article: "A waiting period put to good use, may be the primary schooling for some splendid demonstration." Such waiting and working spells progress. Let us not try to see the end of the road before we come around the mountain. But let us enjoy the present good while we are on this side of the hill. And if we go step by step, confident that God directs our path, we shall enjoy the journey and reach the goal with joy.

In putting together a jig-saw puzzle, we start out with a jumbled mass of pieces. For a time it may look as if the solution were impossible. But as we persist, watching the model in the picture that lies before us, gradually each piece takes its orderly place, until the last piece is fitted in to complete the perfect design. So we must proceed in working out the puzzle of human existence, watching the spiritual models and persisting until the spiritual whole is revealed and established in consciousness.

Most of us have had the experience of "running up against a stone wall," encountering a problem which seems impossible to solve. Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 109), "The devotion of thought to an honest achievement makes the achievement possible." Note the words "devotion of thought." That is where the patience comes in. When we devote our thought to anything, we work patiently, consistently, and unwaveringly toward the goal. And when our goal is the spiritual understanding which will solve the problem and heal the situation, we give up mortal testimony and accept only spiritual facts.

An apostle writes (James 1:3, 4): "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing."

Gould Academy's nine will play host on Saturday, May 10 at 2:00 p. m. to South Paris and on Wednesday, May 14, at 3:15 to Mexico.

Both will be League games. Gould already has a win over Paris, but will probably be facing the Cardinals at Mexico, on Saturday when Mexico Pintos will be making their first appearance against the Huskies.

Tuesday May 13, at 4:00 p. m., the Gould J. V. nine will face Andover High in the opening game for the Academy understudies.

The Academy presents another in its school assembly service programs in Wm. Bingham Gymnasium, Friday, May 9, at 11:15 a. m. The program features "The Shooting Muffs," America's ace shooting family, featured annually in the nation's major sportsman shows. The father, Frank Mansfield, has been universally acknowledged as one of the nation's outstanding trick shooting performers who has pulled the trigger on some nine million bullets. He is ably assisted in his act by his wife, Marie, and daughter, Jeanie, both excellent shots in their own right. The public is cordially invited to attend.

BUDGET RECOMMENDED TO CONTROL FAMILY FINANCING

The family budget is an effective tool to control family spending.

Dr. Ruth R. Honey, associate professor of family economics and housing at the Pennsylvania State College, says that while many families are enjoying a prosperity they didn't have ten years ago, others are having a difficult time because their income increase has lagged behind price increases.

People depending on investment incomes, those living on rather fixed salaries, and landlords particularly are in this latter group.

A chart on an average family budget might show, for example, that food takes about 45 cents of the dollar; clothing, 12 cents; rent, 12 cents; fuel, light, and refrigeration, 7 cents; house furnishings, 5 cents; and miscellaneous, 10 cents.

These amounts will vary with different families, Dr. Honey agrees, but points out that they give an idea as to where cuts can be made.

Prodding and pressing as much food as possible and buying foods in season as well as cutting on entertaining can help to reduce the large amount spent for food, Dr. Honey says.

Careful use of present equipment and furnishings, emphasizing quality in terms of purchase, the elimination of certain luxuries, and home repair jobs were cited as other means to cut expenses.

"While saving on the little items is important, it is the areas that cut deepest into the budget that offer the greatest opportunities for budget balancing," Dr. Honey says.

The LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

Of all the things that this USA is overstocked with, it is "problems"—we bulge at the seams. We don't solve one until we are handed a newer one. We elect gents who say, listen, folks, I'm your pal, soon as I get settled in my swivel chair I will smooth your path. So we say, you are our huckleberry — we believe every word you say—here is our vote. And in all this nation's 177 year history never before were we so over-run with unsolved problems.

We are world's sucker deluxe. And as we build taller and wider and more lavish schools, the problems increase. We cram our offshoots on the campus with education—but for wisdom, and how to judge as to what is true and what is hokey, that goes by the board. No school that I can discover anywhere in this land includes "Anasop in its curriculum.

The labor temple puts its pickets on the march. For a sad sight, there is none sadder or more pitiful looking than a picket treading his beat. First we have a "problem," then we have a "racket"—that is the mode. One group cooks up a scheme to "homogenize" the races, another says let's have municipal ownership—we been electin' all of them. That is us all over—over and over again.

suckers de luxe for problems. Yours with the low down, JO SERRA

In nearly all the farming areas of Maine, a few stands of bees can be kept on the farm with profit, says Professor Charles O. Dirks, of the University of Maine. Free Maine Extension Bulletin 346 (revised), "Keeping Bees in Maine," may be obtained from county agents.

REVERIE, For Mother's Day
Addie Kendall Mason
My Mother's soft laugh o'er my senses doth steal,
And oft on my lips her caresses I feel;
Yet it's only in dreams, for the years have been long,
Since she went from my presence to join Heaven's throng.
Dear little Mother! thy swift willing hands
Were ever so ready to do,
No feet were so tireless, no voice was more tender,
No heart so loyal and true.
How often when trouble and sadness are 'round me,
I long for her presence to cheer;
Her counsel to guide me when ways are so darksome,
Her hand clasp so loving and dear.
Dear little Mother! thy foot steps now follow
The path ways by waters so still
And God hath restored to thine eyes their lost brightness,
To thy voice its musical trill.
Oh! Mother, if ever its given to angels,
—And thus some wise one did say,
Permission to watch over with gentle compassion
The loved on this old earth so gray.
Keep me from forgetting the faith that you taught me
When in childhood I knelt at your knee;
With the same faithful heart and eyes clear and tender
Dear little Mother! Keep watch over me.

It's free from county home demonstration agents or by writing the Agricultural Extension Service, University of Maine, Orono. MANY RUG STAINS can be removed easily if you get them while the stain is still fresh, clean, lukewarm water sponged on to the stain is often all that's needed.

In the case of rug stains where you know just what the stain is, you can treat it more effectively with the proper solvent. For example, if you know it's grease, sponge with cleaning fluid, and work to the center of the stain, to avoid spreading it and also to prevent a ring around it.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Bacon-Noodle Scramble
(Serves 4)
4 pound sliced bacon
2 tablespoons bacon drippings
2 eggs
1 cup milk
1 box (10 ounce) package noodles, cooked
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup grated onion
1/2 cup chopped parsley
Cook bacon slowly and collect fat as it cooks. When cooked, remove bacon from pan. Measure out bacon drippings into pan. Beat eggs, add milk, seasonings and cooked noodles. Cook mixture in drippings until brown, stirring occasionally. Arrange in center of platter and surround with bacon.

When you're using professional liquid cleaners for rugs, or dry powders, use a brush which fits neatly in the hand. A scrubbing brush, purchased and used just for this purpose, is ideal.

For a homemade rug shampoo, dissolve 2 cups detergent or soap in a gallon of water. If desired, add a drop or two of ammonia. Beat in a liter with an egg beater, then apply with a brush or sponge. Wipe off with a damp sponge or piece of heavy cloth wrung out in clean, lukewarm water. Rinse on all soiled areas. After a second time, the same way, then go over area with dry cloth.

Handsoiled rugs can be washed successfully at home, either by the above method, or by the washing machine, if they're a small enough size. The same applies to small rugs and mats.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

This snapshot is fine in black-and-white, but if it were in color, the print of the mother's dress would dominate the picture.

Restraint Is a Virtue in Color Photography

Many users of color film, particularly those who are new at it, tend to see how much color they can get into each picture. The result can be what the writer of the new edition of "How to Make Good Pictures" describes as a "vibrant color hash."

He was making specific reference to a picture of a pretty girl who was wearing a brightly colored blouse in a geometric print with an equally bright skirt in a flower design. Unfortunately, the model's pretty face was completely overshadowed by the riot of brilliant color in her costume. The same picture would have been all right in black and white because the printed fabric would have been recorded in shades of gray and would not have dominated the picture.

When shooting pictures in color, you have to think in terms of the color in the scene where you are. In nature most of the color combinations tend to be pleasing and harmonious—not clashing, garish, noisy—and it offers a good example to follow in setting up your color pictures. Most beginners tend to crowd too much raw color into their pictures—vibrant reds, greens, purples, yellow. They have to learn that a very small amount of color will produce a pleasing picture. For example, think of a snow scene with a few dark green evergreens and delicate blue shadows on the snow. That would be subtle, yet complete and very pleasing. Big splashes of poster paint color may be exciting at first glance, but they don't wear very well.

In planning shots it is well to remember that vivid reds and yellows tend to attract attention and are, therefore, helpful as accents at or near the center of interest. Cool dark colors, on the other hand, tend to recede so that gray-greens, blue-greens, dark blues, are especially useful as backgrounds.

None will take care of the color arrangement in most of your pictures, but when you can move your subject around to suit yourself, keep color balance and harmony in mind.

LITTLE KNOWN FACTS ABOUT OUR WELL-KNOWN FACULTY

by Bob Harriman in the Vermont Junior College News

Miss Ivy Catherine Philbrook, dietitian and home economics instructor, takes the spotlight as this week's personality, and should be of particular interest to everyone for she eats the college table, so to speak. It is through her capable hands that menus, (including proper minerals and vitamins) are transformed into tempting and carefully planned meals.

Miss Philbrook was born of Anglo-Saxon parentage in Bethel, Maine, attended its grammar schools and graduated from the Gould Academy in 1943. She continued her education at Nassau College at Springvale and graduated as a diet therapy major in 1947. After two months of field training at the Boston Dispensary Food Clinic, and after some time at the Maine General Hospital in Portland, she came to Vermont Junior College, and states she has now been here five years.

Miss Philbrook gives special praise to those who work with her. "I don't believe you can find people anywhere to replace them," she said, "for as to friendliness and efficiency, they are tops. I like the students," she continued, "and I seem to 'unspoil' Vermont."

Miss Philbrook has so many hobbies and outside interests, that it would take a column to list them, but here are just a few: she loves classical music; (private sources have it that she has acquired a fortune in phonograph records); treasures literature, (especially the works of Edna St. Vincent Millay—also a native of Maine); likes hunting and fishing and is quite an enthusiastic mountain climber. "In Vermont," she states "my hobby especially is exploring all the various dirt roads which comprise the true students," she continued, "and I seem to 'unspoil' Vermont."
